

Famous Award for the PREMAX

The world-wide leading manufacturer of commercial dishwashing systems HOBART has won the FCSI European Award. The company located in Offenburg, Germany, has been awarded for its new flight-type dishwasher PREMAX FTP in the category “Distinguished Development Design” by the international association of catering trade planners and -consultants “Foodservice Consultants Society International” (FCSI).

The prize was presented on the annual conference of FCSI Europe/Africa/Middle East in Prague. Companies are awarded with the FCSI European Award for their outstanding innovations in the field of product research, design and development. Ralf Hübner, HOBART managing director: “We are very proud and this prize is our reward for years of researching and developing.”

With the award-winning flight-type dishwashing machine PREMAX FTP HOBART has started a new era of dishwashing. The machine needs 180l less water and about 50% less energy and detergent with the same productivity, compared to machines of similar size. In addition, the emission of CO₂ has been reduced considerably.

The saving potential of flight-type dishwashing machines is immense. For example, the app. 30.000 machines of this magnitude, installed and used in Europe, consume more than 20 billion litres of water a year. More than half of it could be saved with the PREMAX FTP. Regarding the emission of CO₂ the annual saving potential in Europe is about 800.000 tons.

With the PREMAX HOBART has made an important contribution to the conservation of resources and the protection of the climate. Ralf Hübner: “The FCSI European Award makes our intention stronger to stick true to our principle: always to consider best possible efficiency and a protective handling of the environment as most important factors regarding innovations.

The FCSI is an international association of catering trade planners and –consultants with 1.000 members in 30 countries. It was established in the USA 40 years ago and makes a professional advising of its members, companies from the field of catering trade, hotel business, canteen meals and related branches its business, as well as further education and finding contacts.

Every year the FCSI Europe/Africa/Middle East awards companies with the FCSI European Award for outstanding innovations in the field of product research, design and development. With the PREMAX FTP HOBART asserted itself against other competitors.